2011 was a defining year for the U.S.-Japan Council and for U.S.-Japan relations. On March 11th, Japan experienced one of the worst natural disasters in recorded history, the Great East Japan Earthquake. Despite the unprecedented devastation, Japan has begun to rebuild, with the help of its many friends and allies. The U.S.-Japan Council has been honored to play a role in the relief and rebuilding efforts.

As an organization focused on developing strong people-to-people relationships, the U.S.-Japan Council’s leadership felt it was important to step-up and not only establish the USJC Earthquake Relief Fund but also serve as a connector, linking organizations, companies and individuals across the country who wanted to support Japan. It was especially encouraging that Japanese Americans took on leadership roles in their communities to assist Americans who wanted to contribute. Special thanks to all who made generous contributions to the USJC Earthquake Relief Fund and partnered with us on relief activities.

In the months after the earthquake, many of our Council Members and Board Members traveled to Japan and visited the Tohoku region. Some led large-scale volunteer trips while others went into the disaster area and worked hand-in-hand with Japanese Non-Profit Organizations. Our dedicated national network of Japanese American leaders has inspired many.

In the fall, we focused our attention on establishing an enduring partnership with the U.S. Embassy in Tokyo with the support of the Government of Japan. The public-private partnership, TOMODACHI, invests in the next generation of Japanese and Americans and supports the long-term rebuilding of the Tohoku region. The U.S.-Japan Council is honored to administer TOMODACHI, which will be sustained over the next three years.

Our 2011 U.S.-Japan Council Annual Conference, held in Washington, DC, provided a platform for those who have been contributing to relief work to come together with senior leaders from the U.S. and Japan. The Conference focused on entrepreneurship, innovation and education and enabled Council Members to discuss how to deepen U.S.-Japan relations in new, cutting-edge ways. Many of these themes will continue to be developed at the 2012 Annual Conference in Seattle, Washington on October 4th-7th.

We were also privileged in 2011 to co-host an International Trade Reception with the APEC USA 2011 Hawai‘i Host Committee that featured top American and Japanese government and business leaders as well as leaders of Hawaii. Our thanks to the Council Members and Board Members in Hawai‘i who organized such a meaningful and impressive event.

Our efforts in 2011 would not have been possible without the support of our generous donors, partners, Council Members, Board Members, staff and volunteers. We are fortunate to have distinguished leadership on our Board of Directors and Board of Councilors that provide hard work, guidance and opportunities to make an impact and a hard-working, dedicated staff. We look forward to working together in 2012 to expand on the important foundation we have built.

Mission: Strong U.S.-Japan relations are in our global, national and community interest. The U.S.-Japan Council promotes people-to-people relationships as crucial to the U.S.-Japan relationship. We bring together, inspire and engage Japanese Americans of all generations to work with all Americans, Nikkei* and Japanese to strengthen U.S.-Japan relations.

The U.S.-Japan Council (USJC) is a 501(c) 3 national non-profit organization that acts as a catalyst by energizing Japanese American leaders to strengthen and diversify U.S.-Japan relations.

USJC provides networking opportunities for stakeholders in the bi-lateral relationship to build people-to-people connections that deepen ties between the U.S. and Japan.

USJC develops programs and initiatives that explore issues that benefit communities, businesses and government entities on both sides of the Pacific. USJC then forms strategic partnerships that enable the organization to enact change.

USJC cultivates a national network of Japanese American leaders with varied professional backgrounds and provides them with leadership opportunities to help shape U.S.-Japan relations.

USJC is an innovative organization that can quickly adapt to best serve U.S.-Japan relations and the Asia Pacific region. In response to the Great East Japan Earthquake, USJC mobilized to create an Earthquake Relief Fund, Relief Network and later, the TOMODACHI Initiative. USJC remains committed to supporting the ongoing rebuilding efforts.

VISION: A vibrant Asia Pacific region through engaged and interconnected communities committed to the U.S.-Japan relationship.
The recent earthquake, tsunami and nuclear crises have brought the strength, dignity and resilience of the Japanese people to the world’s attention. The disasters have also highlighted how interconnected the world is today, from international supply chains and interlocking tectonic plates to global networks of technical expertise and worldwide relief and fundraising efforts. The time is right for Japanese Americans to step up and play a larger part in the evolving U.S.-Japan relationship by facilitating, connecting and leading the advancement of one of the world’s most important international partnerships. – Professor William Tsutsui, 2011 Delegate

The Japanese American Leadership Delegation (JALD) program provides the opportunity for Japanese American leaders from throughout the U.S. to travel to Japan. The program began in 2000, and 136 delegates have participated to date. The trip creates an opportunity for Japanese American leaders to build relationships with Japanese leaders in the government, business, political, non-profit and cultural sectors. At the same time, Japanese leaders gain a greater understanding about multicultural America through the experiences of a diverse group of Japanese Americans. Upon their return, delegates work with program alumni, local consulates, the U.S.-Japan Council and other community organizations to deepen relations between the U.S. and Japan.

The 2011 Japanese American Leadership Delegation traveled to Japan from March 4th-11th and visited Kyoto, Osaka and Tokyo. The topics explored included economic development, security and trade, women in the workforce, education and entrepreneurship. While in Osaka, three delegates served as panelists at the Japan Foundation Center for Global Partnership Symposium, “Breaking Out of the Comfort Zone: The Role of Education in the Era of Global Competition.”

Throughout the week, delegates met with officials from Keidanren, Keizai Doyukai and Kankeiren in addition to officials from the Ministry of Foreign Affairs (MOFA), Ministry of Economy, Trade and Industry (METI) and the Ministry of Education, Culture, Sports, Science and Technology (MEXT). They also met with Foreign Minister Takeaki Matsumoto on his first day in office, Honorable Yohei Kono and Her Imperial Highness Princess Takamado. The delegates were scheduled to meet with Prime Minister Hatoyama the afternoon of March 11th. That day, the delegates experienced the Great East Japan Earthquake, forever linking them with Japan’s relief and recovery efforts.

The program is sponsored by the Ministry of Foreign Affairs (MOFA) and the Japan Foundation Center for Global Partnership (CGP) and administered by the U.S.-Japan Council.

A delegation of U.S.-Japan Council leadership traveled to Japan at the end of May. The purpose of the week-long trip was to meet with Japanese leaders to assess the state of the Tohoku region and to learn, first-hand, how the U.S.-Japan Council and other organizations could continue to support the relief, recovery and rebuilding efforts after the Great East Japan Earthquake.

The Japan Leadership Symposium: Defining a new Paradigm for U.S.-Japan Relations on May 30th marked the Council’s first official event in Japan. More than 350 people attended the event, held at Keidanren Hall, which focused on the future of U.S.-Japan relations from business and government perspectives. The Symposium was also a part of the public-private partnership agreed upon by Secretary of State Hillary Clinton and Foreign Minister Takeaki Matsumoto after the Great East Japan Earthquake. Speakers included Senator Daniel K. Inouye, Hitachi, Ltd. Chairman Takashi Kawamura, Mitsubishi Corporation Chairman Yorihiko Kojima, Ambassador John V. Roos and Foreign Minister Takeaki Matsumoto.

Ms. Aiko Doden of NHK moderated a panel made up of Frederick H. Katayama, Thomson Reuters; Kumi Sato, COSMOS PR and Mr. Naoyuki Agawa, Keio University. The panelists explored current global perceptions of Japan and how best to accurately convey the Japan of today and tomorrow to the outside world. Mr. Katayama recommended that Japan open itself up and that Japanese be bold and take risks.

While in Japan, the delegation met with leaders of the Japanese Non-Governmental Organizations (NGOs) and Non-Profit Organizations (NPOs) that received funds collected through the U.S.-Japan Council Earthquake Relief Fund. A formal meeting, organized with the help of Tadashi Yamamoto and Hideko Katsumata from the Japan Center for International Exchange, provided an opportunity for the delegation to learn first-hand about the issues that Japanese NPOs and NGOs face on-the-ground in their relief efforts.

Meetings with the business sector included Keizai Doyukai, Nippon Keidanren and Forum 21 to discuss rebuilding the Tohoku region and strengthening economic relations between the U.S., Japan and the Asia Pacific region.

Finally, as a part of the Council’s efforts to support and empower women in the workplace, a symposium titled “Girls Be Ambitious!” was held at Showa Women’s University. The panelists, Susan H. Roos, Joy Sakurai, Jan Yanehiro and Jaclyn Zimmerman presented opportunities and obstacles affecting women in Japan today.
INNOVATE, EDUCATE, COLLABORATE: Moving Forward the U.S.-Japan Partnership

October 6th-8th marked the 2011 U.S.-Japan Council Annual Conference. The conference affirmed that a new paradigm for U.S.-Japan relations is evolving after the Great East Japan Earthquake, and, through collaboration and partnership, the U.S. commitment to supporting Japan remains strong.

The theme and topics of the 2011 Annual Conference reflected that leaders on both sides of the Pacific are seeking innovative solutions and entrepreneurial ideas as well as enhanced cooperation in the Asia Pacific region. By collaborating in areas such as clean energy, entrepreneurship, education and nonprofit sector-building, the U.S. and Japan can serve as global leaders in these fields. During plenary and panel sessions, top subject experts addressed a crowd of more than 350 people. Minister Motohisa Furukawa, Japanese Cabinet Member and Mr. Akio Nomura, Executive Director of the Japan Foundation Center for Global Partnership, were among those in attendance.

Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton served as the keynote speaker, addressing the need to step-up educational exchange between the U.S. and Japan. She also spoke of the intricate network of strong ties between the two nations and the importance of public-private partnerships:

Our strongest relationships have not lived only in the halls of power; they live in the hearts and minds of the American and Japanese people not just in some cold assessment of our common interests, but in the warmth of common experiences, family ties, friendships and the common values that bind us together.

Other highlights from the 2011 Annual Conference include:

- An Opening Reception on Capitol Hill in which community leaders from across the country were acknowledged by congressional and diplomatic leaders for their earthquake relief and rebuilding efforts.
- Remarks by visionaries for the future of Japan: Yasuchika Hasegawa, President, Takeda Pharmaceutical Company Ltd. and Hiroshi Mikitani, Chairman & CEO, Rakuten, Inc. Both visionaries urged the next generation of Japanese leaders to take risks, study abroad and learn English in order to be globally competitive.
- A luncheon session on The Japan Brand featured leading public relations executives: Christopher Graves, Global CEO, Ogilvy Public Relations Worldwide and John Onoda, Senior Consultant, Fleishman-Hillard International Communications.
- An afternoon plenary on Moving Forward with Recovery addressed the state of Japan six months after the Great East Japan Earthquake and offered recommendations to strengthen the region for inevitable future natural disasters.

Empowering the Next Generation

The U.S.-Japan Council Emerging Leaders Program (ELP) is an interactive, educational program designed to encourage the next generation of leaders to act as first movers, innovators and entrepreneurs in their professional fields. Each year, a pool of young Japanese American professionals are chosen from across the country to attend the U.S.-Japan Council Annual Conference. By providing exposure and access to senior leaders on key U.S.-Japan topics, the program motivates young professionals to pursue further activities that promote strong and positive U.S.-Japan relations. Over time, the goal of the program is to develop a diverse pool of successful alumni who think globally, assume greater leadership roles in society and are enthusiastic about sustaining a strong partnership between the U.S. and Japan.

The 2011 Emerging Leaders Program delegates participated in an orientation, attended networking dinners and contributed to meaningful strategic working group discussions at the Annual Members Meeting. At the end of the three days, the delegates had banded together, pledging to complete projects including a business plan competition focused in the Tohoku region.

The 2011 U.S.-Japan Council Emerging Leaders Program was sponsored by ITO EN (North America), Inc. & The Island Insurance Foundation.

The U.S.-Japan Council proved itself as a world class organization through its broad reach and undeniable clout. I was deeply humbled and grateful to have participated in the Emerging Leaders Program. I immediately realized the benefits of the program to be an opportunity to build a sense of identity, access to global leaders, involvement in projects that could grow into lifelong opportunities, a sincere connection with program delegates and a perpetuating desire to do more for our countries. The best part of all is that it has only just begun.

— Kei Ashizawa, 2011 ELP Delegate & Attorney and Title Examiner, Kilburn Law Firm

I believe that it is my role to be an educator and mentor for young American students who are interested in Japan. With my involvement in the ELP and USJC, I have been given an opportunity to not only further empower my students through the networks and connections of the U.S.-Japan Council, but also to think more broadly in scope about the impact that I can have on the U.S.-Japan relationship.

— Naomi Funahashi, 2011 ELP Delegate & Reischauer Scholars Program Coordinator, Stanford Program on International and Cross-Cultural Education (SPICE)
The U.S.-Japan Council and the APEC 2011 Hawai‘i Host Committee co-hosted an International Trade Reception at the Bishop Museum in Honolulu on Friday, November 11th to celebrate the vitality of the U.S.-Japan relationship.

A line-up of speakers from the U.S. and Japan included Prime Minister Yoshihiko Noda, Foreign Minister Koichiro Gemba, U.S. Secretary of Commerce John Bryson, U.S. Trade Representative Ron Kirk and Senator Daniel K. Inouye. Prime Minister Noda’s remarks reflected optimism about the U.S.-Japan relationship and emphasized that our two countries must work together in order to carve out an important role in the ever-growing Asia Pacific region.

Senator Daniel K. Inouye spoke of the extraordinary outpouring of support after the Great East Japan Earthquake, including Operation Tomodachi, led by the U.S. Military and Japan Self-Defense Forces. He also acknowledged the response by the people of Hawai‘i.

More than 650 leaders attended the reception including Minister Yukio Edano from Japan’s Ministry of Economy, Trade and Industry (METI), Japanese Ambassador Ichiro Fujisaki, Congresswomen Mazie Hirono and Colleen Hanabusa, Hawai‘i Governor Neil Abercrombie, Honolulu Mayor Peter Carlisle and other officials. Overall, APEC was very successful for the Hawai‘i community and those involved with U.S.-Japan relations were reminded of the important role that Hawai‘i plays in the bi-lateral relationship.

U.S.-Japan Council leaders including Board Members Colbert Matsumoto, Bobby Ichikawa, Mike Hirai and Roy Yamaguchi and Council Members Wendy Abe and Akemi Kurokawa played an essential role in coordinating the reception. All Hawai‘i-based Council Members served as hosts for the evening and were assisted by Board Members Ernest M. Higa, Stephen L. Kagawa, Jan Yanehiro, Dayne Kono and Governor George Ariyoshi.
The eyes of the world have been transfixed on Japan since March 11th. Now is a time for both countries to roll up our sleeves and, with a sense of urgency, work together to enhance the future for all. — Thomas Iino, USJC Chairman of the Board

In immediate response to the Great East Japan Earthquake on March 11, 2011, the U.S.-Japan Council created the U.S.-Japan Council Earthquake Relief Fund. The fund received $350,000 within 24 hours of its establishment and raised $2,564,817 through the end of 2011. The Fund was created for both immediate disaster relief and the long-term rehabilitation of businesses and infrastructure in the Tohoku region. 100% of donations will go directly to Japanese NPOs and NGOs as well as programs that benefit the devastated regions in Tohoku.

“Japan does need aid. Media reports about charitable giving to Japan have been confusing and donors are seeking information and options. In conversations with Ms. Yukie Osa, Chair of Japan Platform, we heard first hand of the critical need for immediate assistance. We have been inspired by the many stories of Japanese relief workers from NGOs providing supplies by bicycle or on foot. They are working around the clock to supply on-the-ground assistance to individuals and families still in shelters or without housing.” — USJC President Irene Hirano Inouye, on the inspiration for the Earthquake Relief Fund

In 2011, the Council made disbursements totaling $1,291,359 to organizations including:

Japan Platform, an international emergency humanitarian aid organization made up of a consortium of 32 Japanese NGOs.

The Center for Public Resource Development (CPRD), a Japanese NGO organization with 120 member organizations. CPRD has a special interest in providing care for victims with allergies or specific medical conditions.

Ashinaga, a Japanese NPO based in Tokyo that has provided education-focused financial aid and emotional support to children who have been orphaned by natural disasters around the world. Ashinaga was featured in a “Nick News” segment on the popular children’s network Nickelodeon, facilitated by the Council.

Civic Force, a Japanese NGO which responds to domestic natural disasters in Japan and delivers urgently needed relief services.

The Entrepreneurial Training for Innovative Communities (ETIC) Social Innovation Forum, helped to bring delegations of Japanese professionals and emerging social leaders (40 to 50 participants in total) to Seattle for intensive 10-day trainings directed at energizing civil society and social innovation in Japan.

The U.S. Japan Council Earthquake Relief Fund (Fund) was made possible by many generous donors and partners from across the United States.

Major Fundraising Events:

Local leaders and celebrities including George Takei, LAPD Deputy Chief Terry Hara, KTLA’s Frank Buckley and Fox’s Susan Hirasuna joined several volunteers to accept donations while stories and video of the disaster in Japan were broadcast. The generous donations from callers in Southern California totaled over $100,000.

⇒ On June 19th, LA Musicians for Japan, led by Mr. Guido Lamell, performed a concert at the Walt Disney Concert Hall. A chorus of close to 150 singers performed Beethoven’s 9th Symphony. Mr. Frank Gehry, the Hall’s architect and his wife made an additional contribution to the Fund.

The U.S. Japan Council Earthquake Relief Fund was one component of the U.S.-Japan Council’s earthquake relief and rebuilding initiatives following the Tohoku disasters. Other USJC efforts facilitated connections between concerned Americans and Japanese survivors.

U.S.-Japan Relief Network and L.A. for Japan

The Council also created the U.S.-Japan Relief Network, an online resource which served as a hub for information about relief activities and fundraising events across the country. Americans looking to contribute were able to use the Network to find nearby donation sites, fundraising drives, benefit concerts and other ways to help the people of Japan in their local communities. The Los Angeles community created a subsidiary relief network called L.A. For Japan because of the high-volume of relief activities in Southern California.

Genki Notes

Additionally, the U.S. Japan Council, in partnership with the Emerson College Department of Journalism and the Japan Foundation Center for Global Partnership, created the Genki Notes project. The program, inspired by the Japanese word, Genki, meaning happiness and energy, sought to bring hope to the people of Northeastern Japan in the form of hand-made notes of encouragement. Children of all ages wrote or drew messages for Japanese people living in evacuation centers in the months after the earthquake and tsunami. In addition to being posted on the Genki Notes website, the messages were sent to Japan, translated into Japanese and hand-delivered to the evacuation centers. To see more Genki Notes visit: www.genkinotes.org.

U.S.-Japan Council Stories Blog

Finally, the Council created the U.S.-Japan Council Stories Blog to share human-interest stories coming out of earthquake relief efforts. Council Members, staff, volunteers and non-profit partners wrote personal reflections on their experiences in Japan during the months after March 11th. The Council found stories capturing personal accounts of the resiliency of the Japanese people as well as stories of community organizations and companies contributing to relief efforts in unique ways. Visit the blog at: www.usjapancouncilstories.wordpress.com

Los Angeles Relief Assembly:

On March 29th, Los Angeles Mayor Antonio Villaraigosa and USJC President Irene Hirano Inouye convened a coalition of civic organizations to discuss the most effective role Los Angeles could play in aiding the people of Japan following the devastating earthquake. Consul General of Japan Junichi Ihara was present to give a briefing on the current and upcoming needs of Japan. Over 50 business, philanthropic, university, and community leaders discussed next steps together with representatives from the Miyagi, Iwate and Fukushima Prefectures.
THE TOMODACHI INITIATIVE

MISSION: TOMODACHI is a public-private partnership that supports Japan’s recovery from the Great East Japan Earthquake, and invests in the next generation of Japanese and Americans in ways that strengthen cultural and economic ties, and deepen the friendship between the United States and Japan over the long-term.

Background

The United States and Japan cooperated through Operation Tomodachi in the immediate aftermath of the Great East Japan Earthquake to meet humanitarian needs. As a continuation of America’s commitment to support Japan, the TOMODACHI Initiative, a public-private partnership, was established. This movement is led by the U.S. Government and the U.S.-Japan Council and is supported by the Japanese government as well as corporations, organizations and individuals from both countries.

Why TOMODACHI?

The partnership reflects the diverse interests of governments, businesses and civil society to support the people of the Tohoku region while strengthening U.S.-Japan relations. Viewed as a long-term initiative, TOMODACHI seeks to address key challenges in Japan through the promotion of educational exchange, enhanced cultural awareness, increased access to programs and expansion of opportunities for entrepreneurs.

Our Approach

⇒ Coordinate with local communities to match needs with customized contributions.
⇒ Identify Japanese and American corporations with an interest in providing direct contributions or supporting TOMODACHI as a strategic partner.
⇒ Engage with passionate individuals in Japan and the U.S., sharing success stories and branding.
⇒ Partner with celebrities and others to launch a series of headline events.
⇒ Directly sponsor signature projects that advance the goals of TOMODACHI.

TOMODACHI CORE INITIATIVES:

⇒ EDUCATIONAL & ACADEMIC PROGRAMS
⇒ SPORTS, MUSIC & ARTS PROGRAMS
⇒ ENTREPRENEURSHIP & LEADERSHIP PROGRAMS

TOMODACHI VISION:

TOMODACHI seeks to foster the next generation of Japanese and Americans, a “TOMODACHI generation” of driven doers, thinkers and creators who are invested in the future of U.S.-Japan relations, appreciate each other’s cultures and countries, and possess globally-oriented skills and mindsets necessary to thrive.

The 7th Annual Meeting of the Ambassador, Consuls General and Japanese American Leaders was held in Washington, DC on February 10th-12th. The event brought together 33 Japanese American leaders, 17 Consuls General, Consuls and Acting Consuls General, Japanese Ambassador Ichiro Fujisaki, Senator Daniel K. Inouye, 10 representatives from the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, executives from the Japan Foundation and business executives from the Japanese Commerce Association of Washington, DC. USJC President Irene Hirano Inouye and Deputy Chief of Mission Hidekazu Ishikawa served as 2011 co-chairs.

February 10th activities included an opening reception hosted by the U.S.-Japan Council and a dinner in honor of Annual Meeting participants. On February 11th, Japanese American leaders gathered for a full day of meetings to prepare for the February 12th joint meeting, followed by a reception at the residence of Ambassador Fujisaki.

The Annual Meeting brought leadership together from the U.S. and Japan to discuss how to advance collaboration in fields such as High-Speed Rail (HSR), clean & green technology, educational exchange, Japanese language education and building legislative networks with the end goal of ensuring strong U.S.-Japan relations. Throughout the three-day meeting, Japanese Americans and their Japanese counterparts provided recommendations and worked toward solutions topically and regionally.

The meeting was sponsored by the Japanese Ministry of Foreign Affairs and organized by the U.S.-Japan Council and the Embassy of Japan.

Meeting Highlights:

♦ U.S.-Japan Council Board of Councilors Member Dr. Daniel Okimoto explained that HSR opportunities represent the first in a wave of infrastructure projects in developing countries that the U.S. and Japan could contribute to and thus boost GDP growth and the growth of the world economy. Dr. Okimoto described this as a historic opportunity, adding that infrastructure projects will be worth $4 trillion by 2030.

♦ Consul General Yoshihiko Kamo (HI) described the Hawaii-Okinawa clean energy partnership as an example of successful collaboration between the U.S. and Japan. He recommended applying the model on a larger scale to reproduce partnerships similar to the one between Hawaii and Okinawa.

♦ On the topic of Japanese language education, Khoki Kano from the Japan Foundation acknowledged the significant rise of Chinese language enrollment, but argued that if language education is competitive, it will only improve. Therefore, schools can offer Chinese and Japanese without creating an either/or situation.
In 2011, the Council continued to strengthen business connections in key metropolitan regions in the U.S. including New York, Washington, DC, Los Angeles and Hawaii and began expanding into the Northern California region. The network was originally envisioned to create opportunities for Japanese Americans and Japanese in the business sector to expand their contacts for business, social and cultural purposes; to provide learning to enhance leadership skills; and to provide access to key business, political, and community leaders in each region.

In 2011, representatives from the regions gathered in Washington, DC to share information about best practices and activities, as well as to discuss national collaboration possibilities in the future to further relationships between Japanese businesses and Japanese American leaders.

Regions and Organizations represented:

Hawai‘i Japanese Chamber of Commerce (Hawaii)
Japan Business Association of Southern California (JBA)
(Greater Los Angeles area)
Japan Chamber of Commerce and Industry of New York (New York)
Japan Commerce Association of Washington, DC (JCAW)
(Washington, DC)
Japan Society New York (New York)
Japanese Chamber of Commerce of Northern California (JCCNC)
(Northern California)
U.S.-Japan Council (National)

Key events by regional Japanese and Japanese American networks in 2011:

⇒ High-Speed Rail Symposium (January – Los Angeles)
⇒ JBA 50th Anniversary Dinner and JBA-Japanese American Network Meeting (March – Los Angeles)
⇒ JA Dream Team vs. JBA All Stars Softball Game (September – Los Angeles)

The Council’s mission of building people-to-people relationships includes a major initiative to strengthen legislative networks. Bringing together elected officials from the U.S. and Japan is critical for future collaboration between the two countries and in the Asia Pacific region.

The U.S.-Japan Council hosted four members of the Japanese Parliament in May at the invitation of the Tokyo American Center and American Embassy: Takako Ebata of the Democratic Party of Japan (DPJ), Kotaro Nogami of the Liberal Democratic Party of Japan (LDP), Toshiko Takeya of the New Komei Party and Shinji Oguma of Your Party. The Diet Members spent five days in extensive meetings with senior members of the U.S. House of Representatives and the U.S. Senate; officials from the State Department, Department of Defense and FEMA; and the Library of Congress, Congressional Research Center and several Japan experts at various think tanks in Washington, DC. A highlight of the week was a dinner with Council Members and others from the local community who were involved in earthquake relief efforts. The Diet Members agreed that the meetings were beneficial and have remained engaged in Council activities since participating in the program.

In addition to the four Diet Members hosted by the U.S.-Japan Council, several other Japanese parliamentarians visited Washington, DC during Golden Week. Many attended a reception hosted by the Council on Capitol Hill. All of the Japanese parliamentarians expressed deep appreciation for the outpouring of support from Americans in response to the Great East Japan Earthquake.

Looking forward to 2012, the Council will continue its legislative networking efforts by facilitating dialogue between delegations of Japanese Diet Members visiting Washington, DC and their American counterparts on Capitol Hill. To bolster U.S. Congressional exchanges to Japan, the Council will convene a U.S.-Japan legislative exchange summit co-hosted by the Japan-U.S. Friendship Commission. The summit will bring together numerous U.S.-Japan organizations for dialogue on promoting more strategic bi-lateral exchanges between legislators.
After the March 11th earthquake and tsunami, Japanese non-governmental organizations (NGOs) and non-profit organizations (NPOs) took immediate action to provide relief and recovery in their home country, many for the first time. Partnerships between U.S. and Japanese NGOs/NPOs strengthen U.S.-Japan relations as a whole and lead to greater support of this growing sector in Japan.

The U.S.-Japan Council’s initiative to grow and support civil society in Japan has been evolving since the Great East Japan Earthquake. Initially, the Council founded the U.S.-Japan Council Earthquake Relief Fund and determined that 100% of donations would go directly to Japanese NPOs and NGOs as well as projects that benefit the devastated regions in Tohoku. The Council has since expanded its role to supporting partnerships between U.S. and Japanese NPOs and NGOs by utilizing its national network of Japanese American leaders.

The Council has also worked to provide opportunities for Japanese non-profit leaders to exchange ideas with their U.S. counterparts. In May, a U.S.-Japan Council delegation traveled to Tokyo and convened leaders of the fund’s beneficiary organizations to share information and determine next steps. Many of these same non-profit leaders traveled to Washington, DC to participate in the 2011 Annual Conference and Annual Members Meeting.

At the conference, there was a panel dedicated to growing the NPO/NGO sector in Japan which included Sam Worthington, President & CEO of InterAction. According to Mr. Worthington, a disaster in a developed nation creates an environment in which civil society can thrive; with public trust and nurtured overhead costs, Japanese organizations have a great opportunity to grow. At the end of the conference, Council Members had established enduring connections with the Japanese non-profit leaders.

The U.S.-Japan Council Joins Partnership to Create the U.S.-Japan Social Innovation Forum

As a part of the initiative to support Japanese non-profit leaders, the Council partnered with iLEAP: The Center for Critical Service, led by Council Member Britt Yamamoto, the Entrepreneurial Training for Innovative Communities (ETIC) and the Japan Foundation Center for Global Partnership. On July 20th, iLEAP welcomed the first delegation of U.S.-Japan Social Innovation Forum leaders from Japan to Seattle. The delegates represented some of the Japan’s most effective and long-standing civil society organizations and social enterprises. The 10-day intensive training they participated in focused on rebuilding Japan through energizing civil society, empowering emerging leaders and forging global partnerships of mutual support between American and Japanese civil society. Over the next 15 months, iLEAP will bring a minimum of four cohorts of young Japanese social leaders to Seattle for this training program.

JAPAN RISING — November 10th in Los Angeles, CA

On Thursday, November 10th, the Asia Society Southern California, in tandem with the Consulate-General of Japan in Los Angeles, presented Japan Rising: The Future of the World’s Third Largest Economic Power. The conference, held eight months after the Great East Japan Earthquake, refocused attention on Japan and the positive impact the country continues to have on the world. Speakers and presenters included corporate executives from companies such as Airbus, American Airlines, Southern California Edison, Hitachi, Toyota, Mitsubishi, Weber Shandwick, McCann-Erickson and many others. Non-profit and academic leaders from California State University, Northridge, Gunma University, Meiji University, Smith College, UC San Diego, UCLA, Leadership Education for Asian Pacifics, Center for Asian American Media, Japan America Society and the U.S-Japan Council played a role in the conference. Council Member Bill Imada helped to coordinate the event, which was attended by Board of Councilors Member Glen S. Fukushima, Chairman of the Board of Directors Thomas Iino and Council Members Tracey Doi, Erwin Furukawa, Stan Koyanagi and Genevieve Shiroma.
The delegates and USJC President Irene Hirano Inouye were in Tokyo on March 11th when the Great East Japan Earthquake struck. They immediately served as eyes and ears for communities back in the U.S. by speaking with local and national media outlets to describe the scene.

Everything in Tokyo was shut down tight for 24 hours after the March 11th quake, including the highways and all forms of transportation. People were trapped in Tokyo, sleeping in businesses, unable to get home, and running out of food in the downtown area. — Phyllis Campbell told the Puget Sound Business Journal

People were running and screaming, the awning of his hotel shook furiously and skyscrapers down the street swayed back and forth, sort of like trees in the breeze. Tsutsui said he didn’t see any damage to the buildings around him. But train lines were out of service, leaving people with no way to get home. Local schools, universities and temples were turned into shelters.

— A Dallas Morning News interview with Delegate William Tsutsui

It was quite a strong sense of motion but none of the buildings collapsed, a testament to tough building codes and good engineering. To tell you the truth, that’s remarkable. You look around and there’s no damage and you can’t believe it.

— Kenneth Oye told the Boston Globe

The bus was just rolling back and forth, and people came running out of the hotel. It was frightening. — Susan Morita told the Washington Post

They also provided coverage for CNN, MSNBC, CNBC, Fox News, Hawaii News Now, KTLA Los Angeles, KING 5 Seattle, San Francisco Chronicle, KRON San Francisco, ABC 7 Chicago, the Seattle Times, Sacramento Bee, Contra Costa Times and the Rafu Shimpo, among others.

JALD Alumni Trip to Japan

Alumni of the Japanese American Leadership Delegation Program remain committed to supporting strong U.S.-Japan relations long after returning home from their week-long trips. In 2011, a group of six JALD alumni and one alumna of the 2011 Emerging Leaders Program visited Japan to encourage further collaboration between Japanese Americans and Japanese and to support the work of Japanese non-profit organizations in the Tohoku region. The delegation was led by USJC Board Member Kaz Maniwa:

There appears to be an increased awareness of the important role of Japanese Americans in U.S.-Japan relations. This theme was consistently reinforced in all of the meetings held with political, corporate, media and non-profit leaders. This awareness provides an unprecedented opportunity for the continued work of organizations such as the U.S.-Japan Council.

The group identified the goal of their trip as gaining a deeper understanding of the role of NPOs in Japanese society and thereby determining potential strategies to build connections and communications between U.S. and Japanese NPOs.

Strategic Working Groups

U.S.-Japan Council Members have the opportunity to participate in strategic working groups that collaborate throughout the year on projects in fields such as entrepreneurship, clean & green technology, women’s leadership in boardrooms, community festivals, educational exchange, Japanese language education and High-Speed Rail. This is one capacity in which Council Members can contribute their unique professional expertise and make an impact. Strategic working groups are able to convene several times a year including at the Annual Members Meeting held in conjunction with the Annual Conference.
Japanese Americans have a distinct connection to Japan, emanating from a shared heritage and upbringing. Recognizing this special tie, the U.S.-Japan Council encourages Japanese Americans to engage in local, regional and national activities that contribute to the U.S.-Japan relationship. Japanese Americans are uniquely positioned to impact government policy, business decisions and civil society activities by providing expertise and recommendations to their counterparts in Japan. Japanese Americans also act as catalysts, sparking new interest in others in U.S.-Japan relations. The U.S.-Japan Council brings together distinguished Japanese American professionals and nurtures the next generation of Japanese American leaders.

“Japanese Americans have matured in all levels of importance and now can be an effective bridge for Japan in the areas of business, diplomacy and academia”

— Thomas Iino, USJC Chairman of the Board

Making a difference: Nikkei contributions to Japanese success in the United States

BANKING

Japanese Americans helped the Bank of Tokyo start its operations in California after World War II. “It was the Nikkei community and its people who bought half of the shares of the bank so that the bank could legally operate in the U.S. In other words, our very presence today owes very much to the Nikkei community, which we should never forget,” said Masa Tanaka, CEO for the Americas at Bank of Tokyo-Mitsubishi UFJ.

Today, Union Bank holds assets of $84 billion with 404 offices and more than 10,000 employees.

INTERNATIONALIZING BUSINESS

Sen Nishiyama pioneered the art of simultaneous interpretation in Japan. A Nisei from Salt Lake City, he is remembered for interpreting U.S. astronaut Neil Armstrong’s famous line, “That’s one small step for man, one giant leap for mankind.”

ARTS & SPORTS

Yoko Ono, world renowned avant-garde artist recognized for her contributions to peace.

Hikaru Utada, pop R&B singer with more than 52 million albums sold.

Wally Yonamine, a Japanese American from Hawaii, is the Jackie Robinson of Japan, the first American to play Japanese professional baseball after the war. He was a three-time batting champion for the Yomiuri Giants and an inductee to the Japan Baseball Hall of Fame.

The profiles to the right are a small sample of an incredibly diverse group of Japanese Americans who have contributed to society.
