ABOUT THE COVER

The program cover was designed by Japanese American artist Dana Tanamachi. Dana works full time as a custom chalk letterer and has been commissioned by clients such as West Elm, Rugby Ralph Lauren, Google, The Ace Hotel, Adidas, EveryDay with Rachael Ray, Lululemon Athletica and Garden & Gun Magazine. She recently returned from Tokyo where she created installations for the Harajuku Tommy Hilfiger store. She has been interviewed and featured by The Wall Street Journal and in 2011, Dana was named a "Young Gun" (YG9) by the Art Directors Club and a "Young Creative to Watch" by HOW Magazine. Most recently, Dana had the honor of creating O Magazine's first entirely hand-lettered cover for their February 2012 issue. Dana is the niece of 2007 Japanese American Leadership Delegation alumna Sandra Tanamachi.

OU.S.-JAPAN | 2012 Annua СОИNСІГ | Conference

We are pleased to welcome you to the 2012 U.S.-Japan Council Annual Conference: Power of One, Impact of Many. We invite you to discover the power of people in U.S.-Japan relations, as we convene Japanese American, Japanese and U.S. leaders committed to deepening ties between the U.S and Japan. Throughout the weekend, we encourage you to engage and contribute to the discussion about new and innovative ways the U.S. and Japan can work together in all sectors of society. A year and a half after the Great East Japan Earthquake, tsunami and nuclear crisis, we will also examine the important roles that social innovation and business play in the recovery process.

Seattle is home to entrepreneurs, innovators and business leaders whose ideas and inventions have made a sizable imprint on today's world. Washington State is consistently ranked as one of the most enterprising states in the nation, which aligns with our goal of promoting innovative collaboration between the U.S. and Japan. The entrepreneurial focus of this year's conference includes the final round of competition in the TOMODACHI Tohoku Challenge, a business plan competition aimed at finding solutions to economic challenges in the post-quake Tohoku region of Japan. Serendipitously, the three finalists' projects each support one of the three hardest-hit prefectures in the region.

In 2012, many of our Council Members, Board Members and friends stepped up to participate in the TOMODACHI Initiative, which brought close to 500 Japanese students from Tohoku to the U.S. this summer for educational and cultural exchanges. Thank you to those of you who made an effort to meet students visiting your region, and we are pleased that all conference attendees will have the opportunity to meet three students from the TOMODACHI Summer 2012 BEYOND Tomorrow U.S. Program. Together we are building a resilient and driven TOMODACHI Generation.

Our sincere appreciation goes out to our Board of Directors and Board of Councilors for their ongoing support and guidance. Over the past three years, they have watched the U.S.-Japan Council grow and evolve. It is because of their leadership that we are able to make such an impact with our programs and initiatives.

We are grateful for the generous sponsorship of the 2012 Annual Conference. The presence and participation of our sponsors at the conference reflects true partnership. Our conference sponsors, Corporate Members and Council Members provide the support required to continue our work building strong people-to-people relationships between the U.S. and Japan.

We hope you enjoy the conversation that is about to unfold and we anticipate that meaningful follow-up activities and actions will occur long after the 2012 Annual Conference concludes. We look forward to your participation in the implementation of our vision as we strive to continually reinvigorate U.S.-Japan relations of today and tomorrow.

Sincerely,

Thomas Iino | Chairman

Irene Hirano Inouye | President

Welcome

On behalf of the Seattle Host Committee, I am pleased to welcome you to the Pacific Northwest. We are thrilled that the U.S.-Japan Council selected Seattle to host the 2012 Annual Conference. We are very proud of this region's long-standing economic, social and cultural relationship with Japan. Our proximity to Japan has historically made for strong trading partnerships, sister city relationships and educational exchange programs. Seattle is home to a vibrant Japanese American community committed to strengthening and diversifying U.S.-Japan relations. In fact, more than 36,000 Japanese Americans call Washington State home.

In recent months, residents of the Pacific Northwest have been reminded just how close our two countries truly are. A year and a half after the Great East Japan Earthquake and tsunami struck the Tohoku region of Japan, marine debris loosened by the tsunami has begun arriving on our shores. In addition to Oregon and Washington, communities in California, Hawaii and Alaska have been affected. Japanese Americans in these communities have catalyzed collaboration efforts and stepped up to support shore clean-ups. We are committed to working with all community members on these activities because of our deep and meaningful friendship with Japan.

Throughout the conference, you will notice a Northwest flavor, as we showcase regional projects that strengthen U.S.-Japan relations, share community assets that make the Nikkei community here particularly dynamic and even feature local entertainment. The Host Committee has been very fortunate to have the support of the Consulate-General of Japan in Seattle, led by Consul General Kiyokazu Ota.

Many of our esteemed speakers and panelists are based in the Pacific Northwest, headed up by keynote speaker Raymond L. Conner, President & CEO, Boeing Commercial Airplanes. Phyllis Campbell, Chairman, JPMorgan Chase & Co., Pacific Northwest Region will close the Annual Conference. Charles Allcock, Director, Business Development, Portland General Electric; Mark Mitsui, President, North Seattle Community College; Tomio Moriguchi, Chairman of the Board, Uwajimaya, Inc. and Tay Yoshitani, CEO, Port of Seattle, will all serve as panelists.

The Host Committee encourages conference attendees to Stay Sunday and See Seattle. We have arranged a special Nihonmachi Tour, which will take participants to the Panama Tea House (inspiration for the acclaimed book Hotel on the Corner of Bitter & Sweet), the Nisei Vets Japanese American Memorial Wall and our recently renovated Japanese Cultural Center. And of course, there are other iconic sites in Seattle to explore on your own – including Pike Place Market, the Space Needle and the newly opened Chihuly Glass Garden.

I am grateful for the dedication and hard work by the Seattle Host Committee members over the past year to assist USJC in presenting this year's conference. We thank everyone who made the trip, especially our participants who traveled from Japan. It is an honor for Seattle to host you and we look forward to many bright years of friendship between the U.S. and Japan.

Sincerely,

Jill Nishi Seattle Host Committee Chair

About the U.S. Japan Council

OUR MISSION

Strong U.S.-Japan relations are in our global, national and community interest. The U.S.-Japan Council promotes people-to-people relationships as crucial to the U.S.-Japan relationship. We bring together, inspire and engage Japanese Americans of all generations to work with all Americans, Nikkei and Japanese to strengthen U.S.-Japan relations.

OUR VISION

A vibrant Asia Pacific region through engaged and interconnected communities committed to the U.S.-Japan relationship

OVERVIEW

The U.S.-Japan Council is a 501(c) 3 non-profit educational organization that contributes to strengthening U.S.-Japan relations by bringing together diverse leadership, engaging stakeholders and exploring issues that benefit communities, businesses and government entities on both sides of the Pacific. Recognizing the catalytic role that Japanese Americans play in strengthening U.S.-Japan relations, the Council cultivates a national network of Japanese American leaders known as Council Members. The U.S.-Japan Council collaborates with other organizations and institutions to develop programs that allow Council Members to engage with their Japanese counterparts and leaders in the U.S.

The Council was founded in 2009 and is headquartered in Washington, DC with a regional office in Los Angeles, CA. In 2012, the U.S.-Japan Council (Japan) was created to support the administration of the TOMODACHI Initiative. The U.S.-Japan Council (Japan) maintains an office in Tokyo, Japan.

WHY U.S.-JAPAN?

The U.S.-Japan relationship continues to demonstrate its relevance and fundamental role in the Asia-Pacific region. The partnership between the U.S. and Japan is a driving force behind economic growth, while the security alliance maintains peace and stability in the region. Built on shared values such as innovation and resiliency, the contemporary U.S.-Japan relationship continues to evolve and develop new frontiers for collaboration.

WHY JAPANESE AMERICANS?

Japanese Americans have a distinct connection to Japan, emanating from a shared heritage, upbringing and history. Recognizing this special tie, the U.S.-Japan Council encourages Japanese Americans to engage in local, regional and national activities that contribute to U.S.-Japan relations. Japanese Americans are uniquely positioned to impact government policy, business decisions and civil society activities by providing expertise and recommendations to counterparts in Japan and engaging with U.S. leaders in America. U.S.-Japan Council programming not only brings together distinguished Japanese Americans professionals, but also engages the next generation of Japanese American leaders to ensure an even brighter future.

Blending New Ideas for a Better World

What will the world be like tomorrow? What will its aroma be? Whatever it may be, Mitsubishi Corporation will have played its part, blending new ideas, new businesses and new ways of doing things.

Sodex Corporation (current LEOC Co., Ltd.), a medical food service joint venture between Mitsubishi and Sodexho in France. He served as CEO and listed the company on JASDAQ. In April 2000, he initiated the Lawson Project Management Dept. & Food Service Business Dept. in Mitsubishi and became General Manager of the department. He joined Lawson in 2002 and was appointed President & CEO that year. Niinami received a Bachelor of Economics from Keio University and an MBA from Harvard Business School.

Topic Engagement Session One

Education

This session will address the ever-pertinent topic of education. Panelists will discuss innovative approaches and unique partnerships promoting educational exchanges between the U.S. and Japan for both students and emerging leaders. They will also focus specifically on leadership development and creating educational opportunities to help revitalize the Tohoku region following the Great East Japan Earthquake. Panelists will explore changing policies and practices with regard to emphasizing international education within Japan and discuss the importance of identifying educational resources.

Entrepreneurship: TOMODACHI Tohoku Challenge

The top three finalists of the TOMODACHI Tohoku Challenge (TTC) will pitch their business plans in front of a panel of expert judges. TTC is an innovative business plan competition created and led by U.S.-Japan Council Members, focused on entrepreneurial solutions to economic challenges in the post-quake Tohoku region of Japan. The three finalists' projects each help one of the three hardest-hit prefectures. TTC supports venture businesses that will bring innovation and employment to the Tohoku region of Japan and accelerate the rebuilding of the area. The judges are members of the USJC Entrepreneur Leadership Advisory Board (UE-LAB): a select group of leading Japanese and American entrepreneurs, investors and analysts with extensive experience in innovation and business start-ups in the U.S. and Japan, who are active in promoting entrepreneurship in Japan. After the panel, the judges will deliberate and the winner – who receives a prize package including placement in a leading venture accelerator in Japan – will be announced during the luncheon.

Mental Health

For the first time, the U.S.-Japan Council will feature Mental Health at the Annual Conference. Panelists will explore current mental health needs and programs within Japan. Marking approximately one and half years since the Great East Japan Earthquake, this session will focus specifically on the revitalization efforts in Tohoku within the mental health field. Panelists will recount mental health initiatives associated with immediate relief efforts following the March 11th disasters, as well as mid- and long-term mental health programs and initiatives. They will look to answer how the March 11th disasters impacted Japanese society's perception of the mental health field. Additionally, the panelists will examine opportunities for developing partnerships between U.S. and Japanese institutions to further support those affected by the Great East Japan Earthquake.

New Technology

Capitalizing on the West Coast destination of the 2012 Annual Conference, a region known for its innovation, a New Technology panel has been created to explore innovative projects in this area. In the wake of the Great East Japan Earthquake, panelists will specifically focus on mid- and long-term economic revitalization efforts in the Tohoku region that have utilized new technologies. They will look to identify specific technologies and sectors that could contribute to recovery process. Additionally, panelists will discuss opportunities for U.S.-Japan enterprise collaboration.

Topic Engagement Session Two

Economic Collaboration Round Table

As the United States and Japan seek new opportunities for business creation and economic growth, an important element to consider is collaboration—between companies, government agencies and universities, both domestically and across borders. Both countries possess substantial economies of scale, innovative companies, leading-edge technologies and sophisticated industrial and consumer markets. This roundtable convenes speakers from government and the private sector to share their experiences in successful collaborations and to examine what lessons can be drawn from them for future success, both domestically and globally.

Entrepreneurship

Recognizing entrepreneurship as the beacon for future economic growth, this session will look at how to catalyze entrepreneurialism within a society. The panelists will take turns discussing entrepreneurship in the U.S. and Japan from their perspectives of providing services and interacting with entrepreneurs in different industries. They will give pointers on how entrepreneurs can navigate different countries' environments, and on how to create environments in which entrepreneurs thrive. They will also discuss their observations on U.S.-Japan collaboration in entrepreneurship.

Healthcare/Biomedical: A Conversation

The United States and Japan are two of the world's wealthiest and most advanced countries, with substantial and growing numbers of elderly citizens. The two countries are at the cutting edge of scientific and technological advances in such seminal areas as stem-cell research; brain research; innovative software systems for handling medical records and healthcare administration; drug discoveries; and treatments for chronic illnesses (such as cancer). While the healthcare industry is rapidly becoming a more global, rather than regional, enterprise, Japan and the U.S. have different cultures and mindsets when it comes to healthcare and medicine. Panelists will explore how the two countries can more effectively and synergistically work together over the next several decades in a way that respects the differences between their societies.

Supporting the NPO/NGO Sector

As Japan looks to rebuild following the Great East Japan Earthquake, this session will provide an update on current efforts and the evolving role of both U.S. and Japanese Non-Profit Organizations (NPOs) and Non-Governmental Organizations (NGOs). Panelists will explore the impact of the March 11th disasters on the non-profit sector in Japan as well as trends in NPO/NGO sector growth within Japan. This session will also explore the challenges of transitioning immediate relief assistance into longer-term sustainable projects that will contribute to the revitalization of the region and opportunities for U.S. and Japanese non-profit sector collaboration.

Featured Panel – Tsunami and Marine Debris: Opportunities for Collaboration

Topic Engagement Session Two

Description

In recent months, debris created by the Great East Japan Earthquake and tsunami has been washing ashore in the Pacific Northwest, as well as in California, Hawaii, Alaska and Canada. Experts predict that 1.5 million tons of debris will reach North America. Panelists will shed light on the situation and describe how Japan's tsunami debris fits into the bigger picture of marine debris in the Pacific. As the tsunami debris arrives, opportunities arise for increased collaboration and dialogue between the U.S and Japan. Many national and local NGOs are pursuing active citizen engagement and volunteer efforts to raise awareness and keep beaches clean and safe. Public agencies and local governments face budget challenges, yet many are finding innovative ways to provide resources to address on-going issues and opportunities.

Panelists

CHARLES ALLCOCK (Moderator) | Director, Business Development, Portland General Electric

Charles Allcock works as Director of Business Development at Portland General Electric, Oregon's largest electric utility. He works with local, regional and state economic development organizations to enhance growth of existing businesses and attract new companies to the greater Portland and Salem areas. Allcock leads regional initiatives on renewable energy and clean technologies including electric vehicles, solar, wind power generation and energy storage. Selected by his peers as a "2012 Pivotal Leader," Allcock is recognized as a clean technology business leader in the Pacific Northwest. He serves as Vice-chair of the Oregon Transportation Electrification Executive Council and was recognized in 2011 by Automotive News in the "Electrifying 100" listing as a global leader in transportation electrification. Allcock serves as Chair of the Board of Directors of the Japan-America

Society of Oregon (JASO) and is a member of the Japanese American National Museum Board of Governors and the U.S.-Japan Council. JASO has been active in Japan-Oregon business development efforts, Tohoku recovery and a collaboration with SOLVE, an Oregon NGO, to engage the Japanese American community in volunteer beach clean-ups of marine debris. He is a graduate of Oregon State University.

JUNICHI IHARA | Director-General, North American Affairs Bureau, Ministry of Foreign Affairs of Japan (MoFA)

Junichi Ihara has served as Director-General, North American Affairs Bureau for the Ministry of Foreign Affairs since September 2011. Immediately prior, he served as the Consul-General of Japan in Los Angeles for over three years. While in Los Angeles, Ihara was a champion of the Japanese and Japanese American communities, working to build economic, political and cultural ties. Before going to Los Angeles, Ihara was the Deputy Director-General of the Asian and Oceanian Affairs Bureau. Before that, he served as Minister, Embassy of Japan in the United States of America. Ihara has had a long career in public service, also serving as Councillor for Inspection; Director Financial Affairs Division, Minister's Secretariat; Director, WTO Division, Economic Affairs Bureau; Director, First Southeast Asia Division, Asian Affairs Bureau, among other postings. Ihara joined MoFA in 1979. He is a graduate of the Faculty of Law, Kyoto University.

DAVID M. KENNEDY | Assistant Administrator, National Ocean Service, National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA)

David M. Kennedy is the Assistant Administrator for NOAA's National Ocean Service. He previously served as the Director of NOAA's Office of Ocean and Coastal Resource Management (OCRM). OCRM leads the nation's efforts to manage and conserve ocean and coastal resources. As OCRM Director, Kennedy oversaw OCRM's Coastal Programs Division, Coral Conservation Division, Marine Protected Areas Center and the Estuarine Reserves Division. Kennedy also previously served as Director of NOAA's Office of Response and Restoration, where he directed a multi-disciplinary program to reduce risks to coastal and marine resources from environmental threats. He has more than 20 years of experience leading hazardous materials management and response efforts, including coordinating federal scientific response to more than 100 oil and chemical spill incidents. Kennedy was a U.S. delegate to the International Maritime Organization's Conference on Oil Pollution Preparation and Response, chaired the Washington State Legislative Committee on Oil Spill Response and was a member of the 1990 Program Committee of the National Oil Spill Conference. He founded the Islands Oil Spill Association, a non-profit oil spill response cooperative. Kennedy received his BA from the University of Northern Colorado.

DAVID PITTENGER | Director, Trash Free Seas, Ocean Conservancy

David Pittenger joined Ocean Conservancy in March 2012. For the prior 15 years, Pittenger was the Executive Director of the National Aquarium, which operates venues in Baltimore and Washington, DC with combined visitation of more than 1.6 million people annually. At the National Aquarium, he was involved in marine trash issues both from an economic development and a conservation point of view. He was a founder of a business improvement district, which aspires to make Baltimore's harbor trash-free and "fishable and swimmable" by 2020. Besides the National Aquarium, Pittenger has worked in a variety of conservation and education settings. He was the Executive Director of the Gulf of Maine Aquarium, a seasonal park ranger in Everglades National Park and a teacher/naturalist at the Academy of Natural Sciences in Philadelphia. He currently serves on the Boards of Directors of the Waterfront Partnership of Baltimore, Blue Water Baltimore, Center for Watershed Protection and Maryland Sea Grant. Pittenger earned a BS at Cornell University and his Masters at the University of Pennsylvania.

2012 Emerging Leaders Program

In its third year, the U.S.-Japan Council Emerging Leaders Program (ELP) is an interactive, educational program designed to encourage the next generation of leaders to act as first movers, innovators and entrepreneurs in their professional fields and in the community. Each year, young Japanese American professionals from across the country are selected to attend the U.S.-Japan Council Annual Conference and Annual Members Meeting. By providing exposure and access to senior leaders, the program aims to empower young professionals to pursue further activities that promote strong and positive U.S.-Japan relations. Over time, the goal of the program is to develop a diverse pool of successful alumni who think globally, assume greater leadership roles in society and are enthusiastic about sustaining a strong partnership between the U.S. and Japan.

ITO EN (North America) Inc. was founded with the mission of introducing ITO EN's line of green tea products and establishing a culture and interest in authentic green tea in the United States and beyond. The breadth of ITO EN (North America) Inc. is increasing through the development of new beverages and loose leaf tea products, the expansion of its distribution network to a national level and the growth of its e-commerce operations. With the attention of industry, the media and the public, ITO EN (North America) Inc. is well on its way to making green tea a true part of the new American culture.

Created to improve the quality of life in Hawaii, the Island Insurance Foundation was established by Island Insurance Company, Ltd., Hawaii's largest locally owned property and casualty insurance carrier. Island Insurance has been serving Hawaii's families and businesses since 1939 and has been recognized several times as one of the Top 50 P&C insurance companies in the nation by the Ward Group.

Throughout the U.S.-Japan Council Annual Conference, I felt a common bond with many other Nikkei, not only in the ELP program, but also throughout the network of Council Members. I now understand that I don't just represent my family as a Nikkei, but that we, as Japanese Americans, represent each other throughout the United States and the world. – 2011 Emerging Leader Ryan Tanaka, Honolulu, Hawaii

2012 Annua Conference

About the TOMODACHI Initiative

Overview:

TOMODACHI is a public-private partnership that supports Japan's recovery from the Great East Japan Earthquake, and invests in the next generation of Japanese and Americans in ways that strengthen cultural and economic ties, and deepen the friendship between the United States and Japan over the long-term.

Led by the U.S. Embassy in Tokyo and the U.S.-Japan Council, TOMODACHI seeks to foster a "TOMODACHI generation" of driven doers, thinkers and creators who are committed to the future of U.S.-Japan relations, appreciate each other's cultures and countries and possess the globally-oriented skills and mindsets needed to thrive and make a difference.

Background:

In the aftermath of the Great East Japan Earthquake of March 11, 2011, the United States military and Japan Self-Defense Forces worked together successfully in Operation Tomodachi to provide immediate humanitarian relief to the Tohoku region. Building upon this cooperation and spirit of friendship, the United States and Japan have launched the TOMODACHI Initiative, a partnership not just between the two governments, but also between both societies, including the business community, academics, civic groups, and sports and entertainment figures.

Approach:

TOMODACHI works to increase the number of U.S. and Japanese students studying in each other's countries; promotes cultural awareness and exposure between the United States and Japan; supports programs in academics, language, sports and culture; and expands opportunities and support for entrepreneurs and future leaders.

U.S. Secretary of State Hillary Clinton spoke to Japanese and American students at a TOMODACHI Youth Leadership Dialogue in Tokyo on July 8th, 2012. Here, Atsuko-san from Okuma, Fukushima shared with the Secretary her story of relocation and how her dream to study in the U.S. was coming true through the efforts of TOMODACHI and BEYOND Tomorrow. Americans share what being a "TOMODACHI" means to them at the Sakura Matsuri street festival that was a part of the 2012 Centennial Celebration of the Gift of Trees in Washington, DC. Participants of the TOMODACHI Coca-Cola Educational Homestay Program tour Washington, DC before traveling to four cities for three-week homestays with American families.

Meet the Executive Director

Laura Winthrop Abbot is the Executive Director of the TOMODACHI Initiative. Based in Tokyo, Abbot works closely with Ambassador John V. Roos, the U.S. Embassy team and USJC staff members. Abbot joined the U.S.-Japan Council in December 2011, following eight months as a Council on Foreign Relations-Hitachi Fellow at the U.S. Embassy in Tokyo. From 2009-2011, she was a Professional Staff Member of the U.S. Senate Committee on Foreign Relations, working on issues related to international development and foreign assistance. Prior to that, Abbot spent five years at the international business risk consultancy, Control Risks, where, as Vice President based in London and New York, she managed political risk and crisis management projects across five continents. From 2000-2002, Abbot was Special Assistant to the President of the Council on Foreign Relations. She holds an M.Phil in International Relations from Cambridge University and a BA from Harvard University. She also serves on the Board of All Hands Volunteers, the disaster relief NGO she volunteered with following the tsunami in Japan in March 2011.
